Introduction.

The Gladiolus is the favorite flower at "ELMWOOD TERRACE", and many thousands of the world's best varieties are grown here, primarily for the pleasure of the owners of the gardens. Naturally each year a large surplus of bulbs must be disposed of to keep within planting space, especially as the gladiolus should not be grown on the same ground two consecutive years, if the best results are desired.

Our bulbs are grown under conditions conducive to the development of the finest quality possible so as to insure prize winning blooms for house and garden decoration, as well as for the big shows. August, 1920 at the Annual Show of the American Gladiolus Society, and the New England Gladiolus Society, our flowers were awarded sixteen (16) prizes, mostly firsts, and the Kunderd gold medal for the largest and finest collection of the Kunderd originations. August 1921, our flowers again received a number of prizes at the New England Gladiolus Society Show at Boston, and later at the big show of the American Gladiolus Society in Ontario, Canada, we made twenty-four (24) entries and won twenty-four (24) prizes, including sixteen (16) first, seven (7) seconds, and the Burpee Silver Trophy Cup which latter was awarded our exhibit of Kunderd's beautiful Marshall Foch as "the finest variety". This being in competition with the best professional and most enthusiastic amateur growers. With these stocks, any amateur observing the proper care in planting, cultivating and watering should produce the same quality of prize winning blooms in his own garden. Those who know the gladiolus only as the small stiff red blooms of our grandmother's time would hardly recognize a relationship to the wonderful creations the modern hybridizers have given us—creations of wonderful size—wonderful colorings—all the tints and shades of the rainbow, the glorious combinations of color in the orchid flowering kinds—the ethereal beauty of the delicate shades with ruffled petals. You may have many hundreds of bulbs and no two exactly alike, so great are the variations in this "The People's Orchid."

From the grandest estate to the humblest dooryard, the gladiolus is paramount among the floral beauties—every year the latest introductions—the newer prize winners are tested in our gardens and if worthy are added to our magnificent collection. We have many varieties not listed in these pages, but if the connoisseur is seeking a particular rare variety, and will write us, we will be more than likely to have it, and if possible will supply one or more bulbs according to the quantity of stock on hand. We take a particular pride in having our bulbs true to name, but if an error occurs, the purchaser has only to report it and the stock will be replaced.

Bulbs will be delivered during March and April, unless otherwise specified.

A select list of the best commercial varieties and rare novelties.

Bulbs at single and dozen rate sent postpaid—at 100 rate will be sent express collect.
